Now that the implant has failed: where do we go next?

Abstract: While dental implants present a viable alternative to replace missing teeth, it is not without its shortcomings. One such problem is early and late implant failure. While the incidence rate for implants loss is low (less than 5% for early loss and ~1% annually thereafter), it is still a major therapeutic dilemma in the dental office. This presentation will deal with different scenarios of implants’ loss, the alternatives to negotiate it and the viability of each of these modalities.

Learning objectives:
1) To learn how to surgically negotiate sites of failed implants
2) To be able to select the best alternative to replace the lost implant
